

“What you learn about friendship at camp is valuable at camp and at home. Your friendships at camp have no electronics, instead you really talk to your friends. You don't need a cell phone to communicate with people. Some people think you do, but you really don't. You have a mouth to speak with, so you don't need a phone. This makes camp friendships special, because you get to talk with them about everything.” Kathleen H, age 9, four-year Heart camper
